The event of death is probably one of the most important occasions in life. We instinctively feel its occurrence demands, some appropriate expression of ceremony to help us interpret its significance.

Like birth and life itself, death is one of the great mysteries that confronts each of us. Cultural customs and patterns of ritual behavior provide a structure of response for re-ordering the meaningful relationships of life.

The funeral fulfills at least three important functions as we adjust to the absence of the person who has departed.

It provides a dignified opportunity to acknowledge that a life has been lived and to mark the separation of one from our midst.

It allows those most intimately associated with the deceased an acceptable context in which to express their intense feelings of loss.

It offers an occasion for concerned persons to share their love and support, their mutual grief and their grateful respect as they gather the resources which the community has to offer in this time of need.

HOLTON AND SON

The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; He leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul; He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for Thou art with me; Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me; Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; Thou anointest my head with oil, my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever.
