Word of the death of Albert W. Blake, 71, a native of Dennis, has been received in Parsons by a cousin, L. J. Chansler, 1900 Belmont.

It was learned that Blake, of Fayetteville, Ark., died Saturday night in a hospital there following a massive heart attack. He had been ill several weeks.

Blake was a retired professor at the University of Arkansas and had headed its printing department for several years.

Blake attended school in Parsons and at Pittsburg State College before entering the teaching profession. He was mathematics instructor in Tulsa schools before going to Arkansas.

He was the son of the late Rolla A. and Susan A. Blake of Dennis. He served in the U.S. Navy two years during World War II.

His wife, Ruth, survives at the home, 238 Buchanan, Fayetteville; also one son, Richard, of Cincinnati; and a sister, Nina Blake Snyder of 999 Van Buren, Annapolis Md. Memorial services for Blake will be held Tuesday in Fayetteville and burial will be in the National Cemetery there.
Word of the death of Albert W. Blake, 71, a native of Dennis, has been received in Parsons by a cousin, L.J. Chansler, 1900 Belmont.

It was learned that Blake, of Fayetteville, Ark., died Saturday night in a hospital there following a massive heart attack. He had been ill several weeks.

Blake was a retired professor at the University of Arkansas and had headed its printing department for several years.

Blake attended school in Parsons and at Pittsburg State College before entering the teaching profession. He was mathematics instructor in Tulsa schools before going to Arkansas.

He was the son of the late Rolla A. and Susan A. Blake of Dennis. He served in the U.S. Navy two years during World War II.

His wife, Ruth, survives at the home, 228 Buchanan, Fayetteville; also one son, Richard, of Cincinnati; and a sister, Nina Blake Snyder of 999 Van Buren, Annapolis Md.

Memorial services for Blake will be held Tuesday in Fayetteville and burial will be in the National Cemetery there.