Obituaries

Cecil Blanpied dead

Cecil C. Blanpied, a noted photographer and a long-time teacher in the New Rochelle schools, died Saturday at New Rochelle Hospital Medical Center. He was 78 and had lived at 164 Church St.

He taught science and mathematics in New Rochelle schools for 36 years, during which time he organized and taught a student photography club at Isaac E. Young Junior High School. He had published photographically for Scribners and several Westchester newspapers and had frequently displayed his work at New Rochelle Public Library and Westchester Federal Savings and Loan Association.

He was married to the former Lallah S. Davidson, who is a writer.

Born on June 27, 1897, in Kansas City, Missouri, he was the son of the late Clyde and Sylvia Diller Blanpied. A graduate of Kansas State College and Teachers College of Columbia University, he served as superintendent of schools in Ludlow, Mo., for two years before coming to New Rochelle.

He studied photography with Otto Litzel. He was a former vice president of the Camera Club of New York and a member of Huguenot Lodge 46, F and A.M. Masons. He was a parishioner of Trinity Episcopal Church.

Surviving, in addition to his wife, are a son, Edward T. Hayes, of Atlanta, Ga., and two sisters, Mrs. Virginia Barron and Mrs. Leah Hudgins, both of Lake Wales, Fla.
Obituaries

Cecil Blanpied dead

Cecil C. Blanpied, a noted photographer and a longtime teacher in the New Rochelle schools, died Saturday at New Rochelle Hospital Medical Center. He was 78 and had lived at 194 Church St.

He taught science and mathematics in New Rochelle schools for 36 years, during which time he organized and taught a student photography club at Isaac E. Young Junior High School. He had published photographically for Scribners and several Westchester newspapers and had frequently displayed his work at New Rochelle Public Library and Westchester Federal Savings and Loan Association.

He was married to the former Lallah S. Davidson, who is a writer.

Born on June 27, 1897, in Kansas City, Missouri, he was the son of the late Clyde and Sylvia Diller Blanpied. A graduate of Kansas State College and Teachers College of Columbia University, he served as superintendent of schools in Ludlow, Mo., for two years before coming to New Rochelle.

He studied photography with Otto Litzel. He was a former vice president of the Camera Club of New York and a member of Huguenot Lodge 46, F and A.M. Masons. He was a parishioner of Trinity Episcopal Church.

Surviving, in addition to his wife, are a son, Edward T. Hayes of Atlanta, Ga., and two sisters, Mrs. Virginia Barron and Mrs. Leah Hudgins, both of Lake Wales, Fla.